THE CHINA MALL.

HONGKONG, TUESDAY, JUNE 23, 1868.

THE COAL MINE DESPATCH

THE despatch of Mr Consul Mongan Mr Henderson, Merchant, of Tientsin is unfortunately one of a class which daily which ever took place in this Colony. experience teaches us is becoming but too common. Mr Henderson, whose zeal rested motives) the warmest recognition, had at length reduced the necessary pro- of the Supreme Court. posals for the development of the Chaitang coal mines to a tangible statement, which was submitted in due official form to the Chinese Authorities. The answer; will be preferred to anything else under the which appeared in our last issue, sets Fung Shuy. It is difficult to preserve ment from a British Consul, and therefore an individual presumably gifted with some brains, in which these childish and absurd objections are set forth as valid reasons | duly carried into effect, and Wat-Yune was for refusing Mr Henderson's suggestions. Why, the veriest tyro in China—the quent to this event the waters of the most newly fledged of the verdant "griffin" species could have stated these | native craft, which was attributed to the off hand as the first objections which would be raised by the Chinese! doubt not that Mr Henderson himself could have readily specified them, as the most likely to be mentioned, but also a the most contemptible which he would have to encounter! The closing paragraph in which "J. Mongan, Consul exhorts "You and any other who may be interested " to " give up all present hopes of seeing the Imperial Government take any steps to improve the means of the purpose of attracting away the fishes Mongan is evidently working up for British Minister, and worthily copies his inestimable superior-only the plagia- of the day, and of which it would be unrism is so essentially "Alcockian" that. while it is " the truest form of flattery." it is scarcely likely to impress the public What a pity it is that Mr Mongan was not in power at home, in the times of Stevenson or Brunel, Paxton or ning a magniloquent essay shewing that "Engineering difficulties and local popular feeling" were opposed to Railways and Tubular Bridges. Glass Palaces and Oceanic Cables ! He has evidently misse faint imitation of what he would do if He held office here during the Anglo-French 258 votes. Committee has been appointed king will be lessened by one third. The the same footing of free commercial interfate had ordained that he should orna occupation of the City of Rams, and when for the 5th June. General Doyle has been Mahomedan Chief at Tarli has already course as those of the West. Indeed, there ment some other post more important than that of the Tientsin Consulate.

according to the most approved rules of that art in H.M. Diplomatic Service in But we assert that if our understood policy-if the means we adouted secure our present position in Chinathe measures which led to the very right and justifiable, the whole tone of freshet. that despatch is simply that of insufferable and deceptive cant. If, on the other hand, the wording of this despatch corseries of unjustifiable violations of every law human and divine, and the very island on which we dwell is but a monument of British greed and British perfidy; of wanton murder and violated settlements in the mainland, and the of "privileges" conceded by shelled out | would make their mouths water ! Vicerovs on behalf of their Government, do not agree with the canting hypocrisy which now, to serve the political ends or the lick-spittle party in England, ignores British interests. One or the other policy is wrong, and there are fortunately but few men in China who fail to recogof British subjects make itself heard even from this remote portion of the earth's surface? We fear not. But if it Consul at Tientsin, the subjects having day, and defendant waited without avail. influence is brought to bear in earnest, and left the Court in a quander. It is needless to reiterate the old arguments, and we have but little doubt the comments we have passed on Mr Mongan's despatch will be heartily endorsed by the majority of our readers.

Chung-king, the trade gorge of four Provinces, Sx-chuen, Yunnan, Kwei-chow, and Chen-si, depends upon tlankow for the supply of Foreign piece Goods which it annually sends into these four Provinces. The present Junk transport on the Yangtze between these two places, basides being extremely disastrous to trade on account of the total loss of many Junks and their cargoes, is very expensive, and this added to the Mandarins' squeezes renders the reigners lived in old Cauton, is sufficient to price of foreign piece Goods after leaving call up a contrast which implies many in-Chen-tu so heavy, that they are unsaleable beyond the Yang-ling range of the Mountains near Chin-Chi-Chien, and this is the limit of Foreign trade with Western China, on, and perhaps will be all the more pernumerous small rivers forming the arteries | manent from the fact that it has to vindithrough which trade flows from Chung- cate its utility and desirability, as it goes king into Kwei-chow, Eastern Yuunan and southern Chen-si. MINING IN CHINA

(North China Herald, June 13.) There is a natural tendency for foreigners resident in China to undervalue the extent of the changes that have taken place in our relations with the Chinese, and even the rapidity with which they have been brought about. The preoccupations of the present speedily efface the recollections of the past, and the marked changes that have been produced are forgotten in the intense desire for still greater concessions. To allude to the altered circumstances existing now, compared with those under which for termediate steps between our gosition then. and now. To the introduction of foreign salt, he is equally opposed. This, he says, would injure native salt merchants. Mining and religion alone meet with his approval. The opening of the mines to foreign enterprise would, he considers, be a step highly beneficial to China and concessions on the score of religion are immaterial. Protestantism has risen up against Catholicism in Europe, Budbism has conquered Taouism in China; but Confucianism has held its own throughout, and the fullest permission to foreign missionaries to preach freely the doctrines they advocate, will not shake it now. We can guarantee the authenticity of this remarkable state paper, and hope shortly to obtain a full translation. In the meantime, the sketch we have given is sufficiently suggestive. Tsen-kwo-fan has always had the reputation of being intensely conservative; so the repetition by him of the stereotyped arguments against steam carringe is not surprising; but the bold expression of a readiness to fight rather than yield, is somewhat startling. Here is an explanation of the wily rumours of approaching war, that have been lately floating among the Chinese. Teen-kwo-fan was going to drive foreigners into the sea, and had enlisted the aid of the Japanese in his design. His visit to Shanghai was for the double purpose of dissunding foreigners from pressing their claim for railways, and taking note of the means of attack in case the necessity arose. Woosung would then be blockaded and, out off from assistance, the unhappy barbarians would be annihilated at leisure, after their food and ammunition had been both exhausted. It is disappointing to find the memories of 1858, of Peking taken and Yuen-ming-yuen burned so soon effaced from the mind of high officials. That the people should forget them is less our prising, means of communication and pub their true importance. But the pride of mandarins in their arsenals must have reached a high pitch, to inspire them with an idea of resisting foreign arms more successfully now than before. We can believe. however, that they really do entertain this National pride repels the admission of physical inferiority; but willingly accepts the alternative explanation of superior armament, to account for defeat. Now, this defect is, according to their notion, remedied; now they have arsenals of their own, turning out cancon, muskets and ammunition after the foreign model: why should they not, on their own ground, with every advantage of numbers, bring a new war to a different conclusion? It may be long before this pleasing dream is dispelled; for there does not exist any intention to thrust the advantages which we offer, down the throats of the Chinese, at the bayonet's point. If milways are rejected now, mines may content us for a time. Tramways will soon be introduced, to carry their out-turn to the nearest trading mart, and steam traction may be found necessary byappliances of foreign science must eventually work their way, in defiance of all opposition, we shall probably not put Tsen-kwefan's courage to the test. But the fact that successful resistance is contemplated ne possible, loses none of its significance. It shows that we have lost prestige; that the mandarius attach exaggerated importance to their argenals; and above all, it shows the intensity of their dislike to the innovations we propose. They think with Tsen-kwo-fan, that railways and steam boats would ruin the boating population. without conceiving the equivalent they offer in increased industry and modes of employment. They think the settlement of foreign merchants in the interior, means the robbery from native hongs of a certain share of their existing business, without conceiving the increased impulse to commerce which it would impart. These impressions are quite natural among a keep pace with increasing wealth and civilisation. The time however is very close at hand, when this creed will be dispelled by practical evidence of its error.
